Claude Steele House

Lonaconing

Private

The Claude Steele House, thought to have been built by Claude and John Steele, is a frame, two story, gable-roofed building on a rubble stone foundation. Its basic configuration is a three bay by one bay rectangle with a center door facade and a two story rear kitchen wing. Asphalt siding, a rear shed addition and a modern facade porch have altered the building's appearance. The site also includes a privy, a coal shed, a turkey house, and a family cemetery.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Claude Steele House is located on the northeast side of Maryland Route 657 approximately 2.3 miles northwest of its junction with Maryland Route 36 in Lonaconing. The site, which includes a dwelling, a coal shed, a privy, a turkey house, and a family cemetery, is situated northeast of Koontz Run on a steep hill that slopes down to the southwest.

The house is a frame, two story, gable-roofed building on an uncoursed rubble stone foundation. Its basic configuration is an ell plan that consists of a three bay by one bay main block with a one bay by one bay rear wing. A one story shed wing has been added to the rear of the building obscuring the original wall surfaces on the NE elevation of both the main block and the rear wing. The facade (SW elevation) has a three bay, center door arrangement with the door placed slightly off center and the second floor center bay left unfenestrated. The two bay, shed-roofed porch on the facade is a recent addition. All windows on the original building are one over one sash with plain board surrounds. The shed-roofed addition has six over six sash. Red brick-patterned asphalt siding sheathes the exterior walls while the roof has a covering of asphalt roll roofing. The roof's box cornice is covered with aluminum siding and has partial returns on the gable of the rear wing only. A brick stove chimney is located on the center of the ridgeline on the main block and another interior brick chimney emerges from the rear wing on the northwest side of its ridgeline.

The coal shed and privy sit side by side approximately thirty feet southeast of the house. Both are frame, gable-roofed buildings. The turkey house lies to the northwest in the woods surrounding the house. It is a two story, frame, gable-roofed structure that measures three bays by one bay. It is sheathed with board and batten siding and lit by two over two sash windows.

The cemetery is accessible by a path that leads northeast from the house into the woods. Nine members of the Steele family are buried there. The earliest burial was in 1914, the most recent 1968.

SPECIFIC DATES Early 20th century BUILDER/ARCHITECT Claude Steele and John Steele

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The house is said to have been built by Claude Steele and John Steele. If this is true, the house dates before 1918 since the two men died in 1922 (Claude) and 1918 (John).

Houses of this general configuration, a two-story rectangular main block with a rear kitchen wing, were commonly constructed in Garrett County from the late nineteenth through the early twentieth centuries.
